The Woman's Page

Women Should Be Body Conscious

First Requisition To Beauty

Ultra-Violet Rays In Demand

Beauty's first concern is a perfect body, with the face but a detail, though an important one. The care bestowed on the body reacts on the face, good health and general well-being enhance its beauty.

So let us be body conscious. If the least malady is suspected it is best to take medical advice, but if you are blessed with normal health then you are free to choose your own particular beauty treatment.

Remember, there is no fault that cannot be corrected, no imperfection that cannot be improved if it is attacked with a will and a modicum of patience.

First an inventory of your good and bad points will not be amiss. Do you need to be slimmer? If so be assured that there are pounds which can be removed whether it be by strenuous muscular exercises or by perspirings artificially induced; or yet again by diet, of which more anon.

Ultra-Violet Rays

Do you lack joie de vivre? If so vitality can be restored by treatment. Certain electrical treatments and especially ultra-violet rays perform miracles in toning up the nerves.

Or maybe it is only a real rest you need? Then you must be introduced to treatments that dispel fatigue with special baths and massage.

Perhaps you lack youth and suppleness? Then gymnastics will restore your lost elasticity and your muscles will be trained to resume their neglected duties. Strenuous exercises must be faced if the fat has to be combated on hips, back and upper arms. These are places to watch, places where fat takes possession almost before you are aware of its arrival. It must be combated at once.

One method of dispelling it is the Giant Roller. Probably because its action is purely mechanical it is particularly intensive. This roller irons and presses with its hundreds of pneumatic rollers brought into continual contact with your body and effectually dislodges any obstinate fat.

Removing Acids From The System

Among the many processes which induce perspiration, that most effective method of removing injurious acid from the system, there are heat baths, light baths and of course, the paraffin bath.

With a paraffin bath a very high temperature is obtained and the profuse perspiration which follows rids the body of any poisons. To take these baths it is first advisable to consult either a doctor or have a qualified expert in attendance. The patient lies comfortably in what appears to be a white wicker

Office. All letters etc., must be marked "By Air Mail" and handed in at the General Post Office. Unless superimposed for despatch by a special air mail service, correspondence will be forwarded by the first service available.

This kingly blue Autumn costume is charmingly worn by Betty Furness, film actress. The suit is of velvet with overlaid of white cotton pique. Hat and shoes are navy blue and the gauntlet gloves are white doekin.

Always See It By Daylight

Colours for day-time wear must be chosen much more carefully than for evening wear, because daylight is so much more trying to the complexion. Always go to the light before going out to see your make-up. In the evening always make-up under a bright light and be sure to see the colour of your evening dress by lamplight—it may appear quite different than by daylight.

STRICTLY TAILORED STREET FROCKS

Grosgrain Ribbons

Paris. The new autumn street frocks are strictly tailored and cut on diagonal lines, and buttons form their principal trimming—good big, shiny buttons of black or coloured cellophane, often with a belt to match. Plain, rather tight, long sleeves are the rule for these simple street frocks. The day of the exaggerated shoulder and the big, draped sleeve is over. Smart French women never did approve of them, for they took away from the slim line of the silhouette. The skirt of the street frock, while still preserving the snug hipline, will have quite a bit more fullness, in the form of inverted pleats or fan pleats, placed well below the knee. Mme. Bruyere is making a skirt which has the appearance of a "wraparound," but which actually has a very deep fold or pleat, either at the front or at one side, which has the merit of giving the slim line while still allowing breadth for walking.

A Little Gadget

And speaking of Madame Bruyere, she has a little "gadget" which will be of interest to the younger woman—a band of narrow, grosgrain ribbon, bright blue, green or red, which is tied around the neck forming a little "choker" with a small bow with long ends at the back. Often the same colour is repeated in a bow which ties the plain, woollen belt or in a bright button or two at the wrists. This gives a bright touch to the plain, woollen frock.

SMOOTH FACED MATERIALS

Velvet For Winter

The return of smooth-surfaced materials in place of the crepey weaves which have been so much in vogue, is assured for the winter, and broadcloth, which made its reappearance in the spring collections, is pretty sure to be a prime favourite for the winter costume.

Satin, too played such an important role in the evening models of the last collections, that it is reasonably sure to be carried on into the models designed for dressy afternoon, as well as for evening gowns, for the coming season. Velvet is sure to be one of the outstanding winter materials and small wonder when one sees the exquisite new varieties which the manufacturers are showing. Most of these are absolutely noncrushable and many are washable as well.

Cinema Notes

"ROMANCE IN THE RAIN"—KING'S THEATRE

Roger Fryer and Heather Angel come to the King's Theatre in Universal's hilarious comedy of a modern magazine publishing office in "Romance in the Rain."

The story concerns a modern Cinderella, who wins a contest and loses her heart to the man who gave her the opportunity but is blind to her charms. He goes as far as to provide her to a Prince Charming, but she rebels. Contrasting with the busy, is a beautifully appointed pen-house on top of one of New York's largest skyscrapers, where the romantic interest takes place.

Victor Moore, Esther Ralston, Ruth Donnelly and Paul Kaye lend excellent support.

"MADAME DU BARRY"—ALHAMBRA, THEATRE

The dark beauty of Dolores Del Rio shines through Edward Chodorov's famous character, the favourite of King Louis XV, whose love affairs were the scandals of French pre-revolutionary days in Europe, in Warner Brothers' current release, "Madame Du Barry," now at the Alhambra Theatre.

The film deals with Madame Du Barry's intimate life and loves, rather than with her political intrigues, although there are clashes between herself and the jealous court ladies and courtiers who seek to destroy her influence over the king.

In addition to the beautiful dances, reproductions of the Palace of Versailles, the Court and the Gardens of the Colonades are among the gorgeous settings for this spectacular film.

Reginald Owen plays the role of King Louis XV, Victor Jory is the powerful d'Aiguillon, Henry O'Neill is Duc de Choiseul, Verree Teasdale is the Duchess de Grammont, Osgood Perkins is Cardinal Richelieu, and Anita Louise is Marie Antoinette.

"HIDE-OUT"—QUEEN'S THEATRE

The story of the reformation of a playboy racketeer is told in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's romantic drama, "Hide-Out," featuring Robert Montgomery and Maureen O'Sullivan, now at the Queen's Theatre.

Robert Montgomery plays one of his most whimsical roles as "Lucky," Wilson, the racketeer who, driven from his favoured New York haunts by the relentlessness of the law, realizes he has not discovered life and love until he finds himself nesting in the bosom of a simple farmer's family. Wifford Kane for 30 years one of the leading character actors of the London and New York stage, carries off signal honours as Farmer Miller.

Elizabeth Patterson, veteran "screen mother" appears as Maureen's mother, and Mickey Rooney, 12-year-old comedian, is seen as her mischievous and inquisitive younger brother. Others in the cast are Edward Arnold, C. Henry Gordon, Edward Brophy and Muriel Evans.

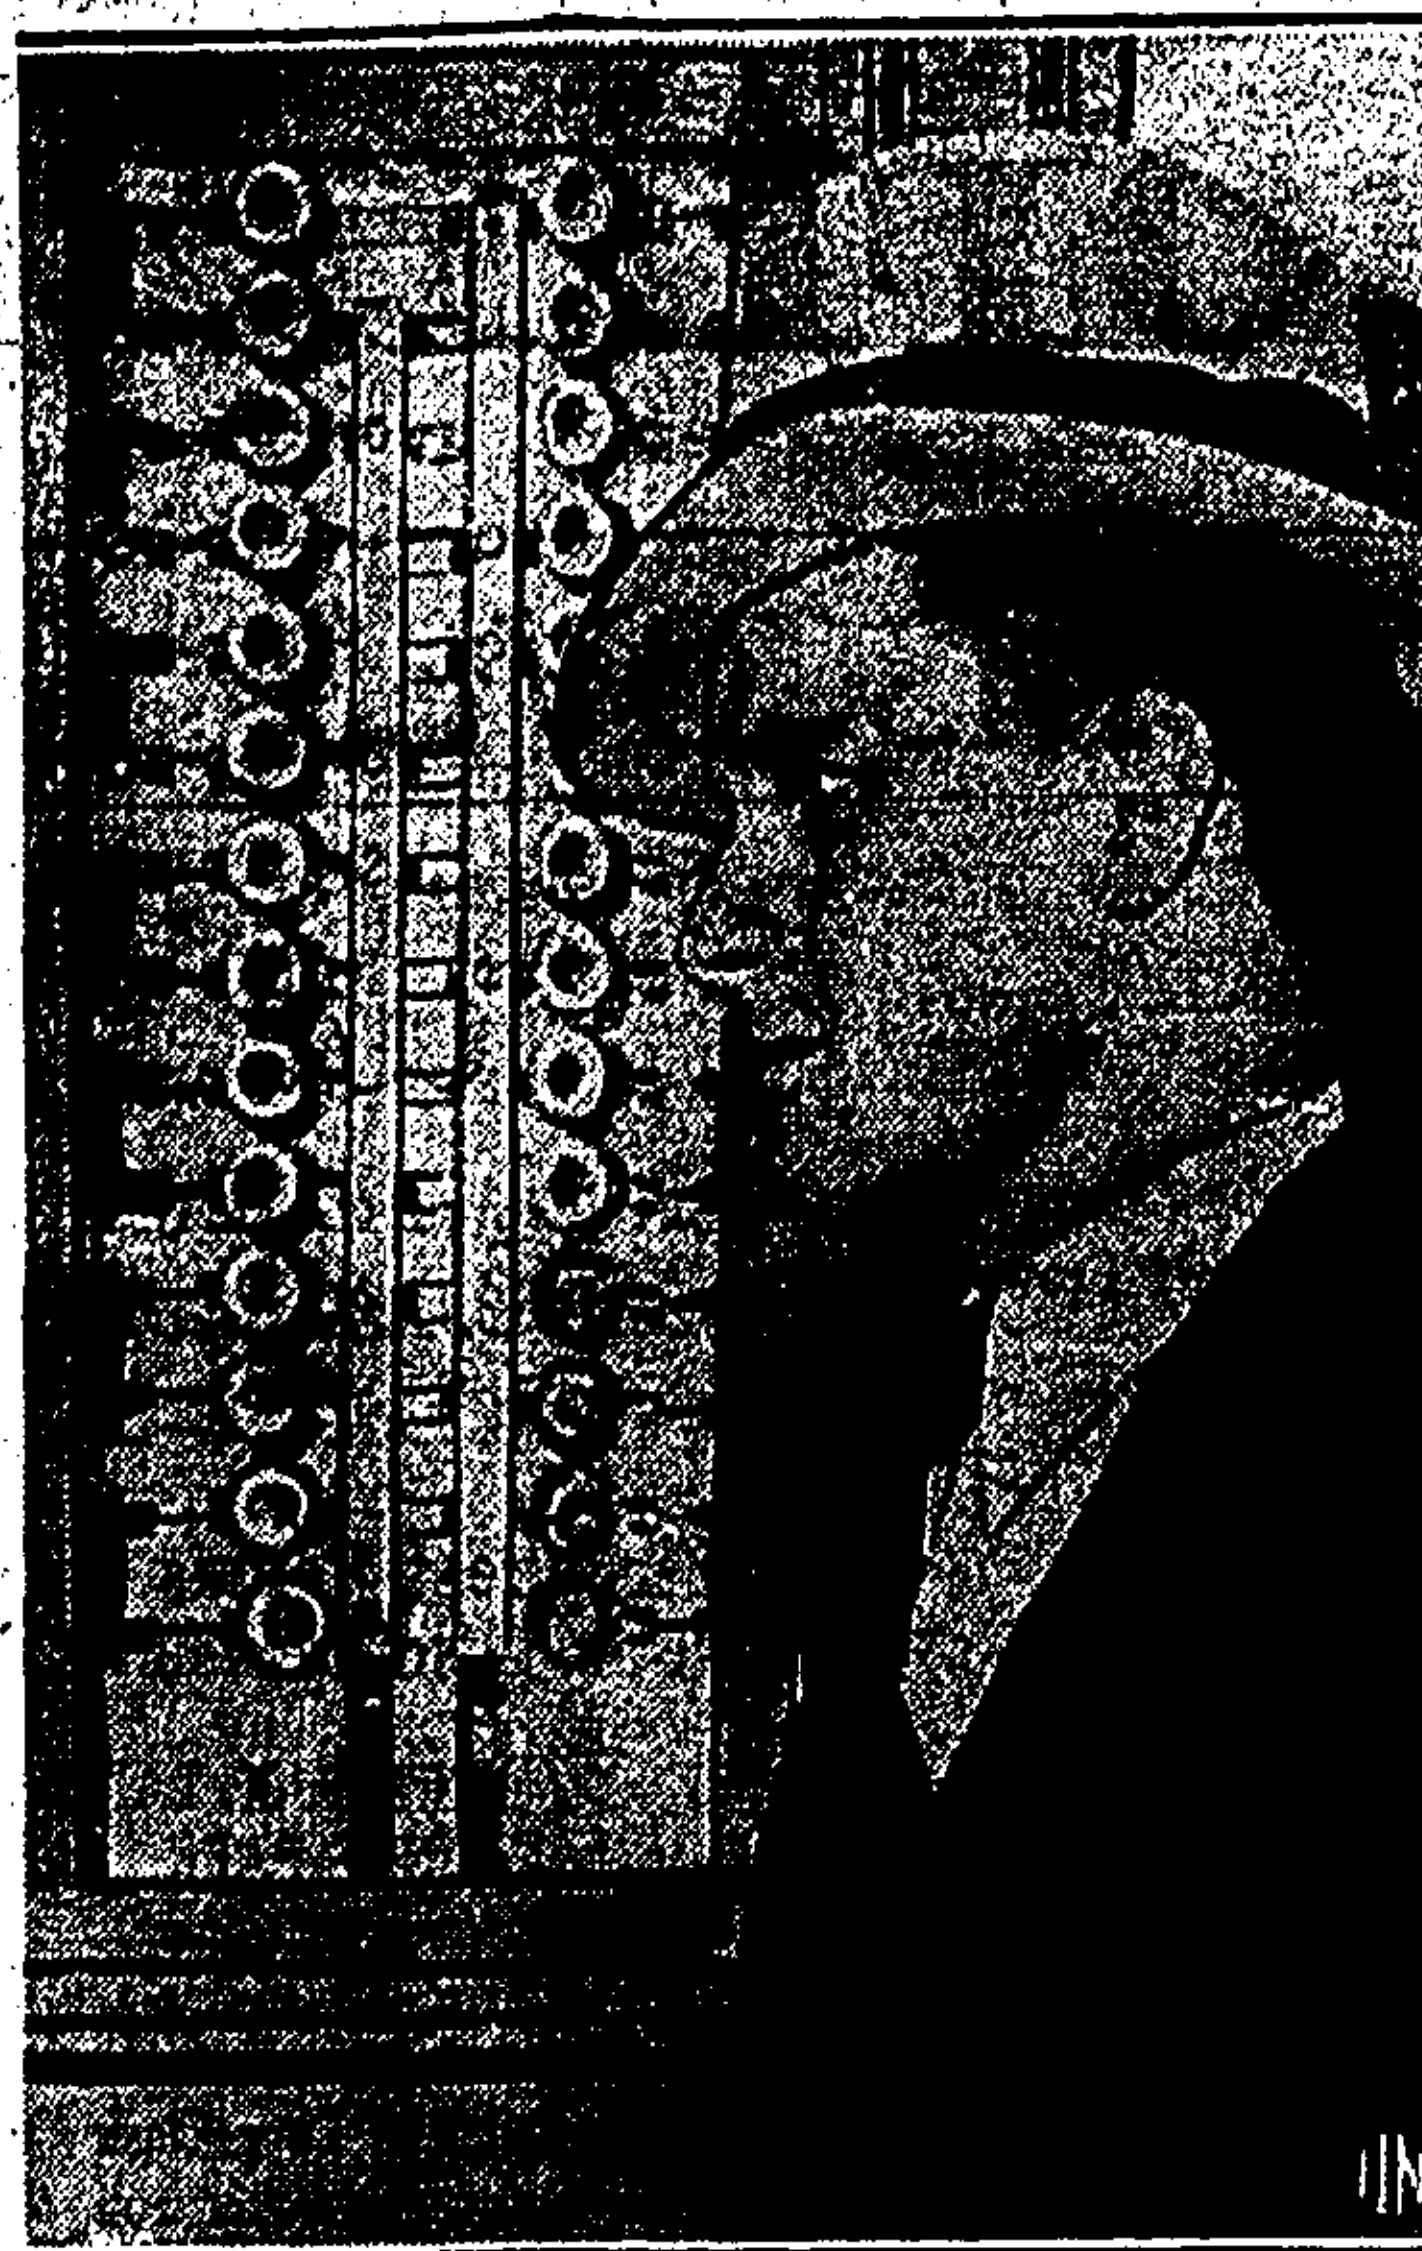

"TARZAN AND HIS MATE"—MAJESTIC THEATRE

Johnny Weissmuller, America's retired swimming champion, and Maureen O'Sullivan, the pretty Irish star, are starred in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's new drama of the African jungle, "Tarzan and His Mate," now at the Majestic Theatre.

Johnny Weissmuller makes an ideal Tarzan, but Maureen O'Sullivan deserves the highest honours. She is pursued by savage lions up a cliff, tossed like an adagio dancer from the tops of trees, somersaults on the trapeze with apes to catch her—just one daring feat after another.

"MEN IN WHITE"—ORIENTAL THEATRE

"Men in White" now showing at the Majestic Theatre, is undoubtedly one of the most effective and distinguished photoplays to reach the screen this season. The picture also features Baby LeRoy, Jack LaRue, Alan Hale, Clark Gable, in a memorable performance, appear as Dr. Far and "Spanky" McFarland.

It was significant that an open switchbox met Robert Edward's eyes as the youth left court at Wilkes-Barre, Pa., where he was convicted of the murder of Freda McKechnie for which he will die in the electric chair.

guson, the young interne who realises all the obligations of his profession but struggle against the conflicting claims of the girl he loves. The girl, played by Myrna Loy, soon comes to the realisation that a doctor so engrossed in his career has no time for love.

The entire cast of "Men in White" seem to have put their whole heart into their respective performances. Gable and Miss Loy have never been greater, and honours go also to Jean Hersholt and Elizabeth Allan.

"MISS FANE'S BABY IS STOLEN"—STAR THEATRE

Dorothea Wieck, Paramount actress, co-starred with Alice Brady, is now playing in the lead-rols of "Miss Fane's Baby Is Stolen," the current picture at the Star Theatre.

The story, originally from the pen of Rupert Hughes and adapted to the screen by Adela Rogers St. Johns, is filled with the emotions of a woman's heart. It calls for the grief, terror, bereavement, joy and love of a mother who can offer her adopted child everything before she is torn from her grasp. The picture also features Baby LeRoy, Jack LaRue, Alan Hale, Clark Gable, in a memorable performance, appear as Dr. Far and "Spanky" McFarland.

BISHOP

"Battling Nelson" Dies In Long Island

REBUILT CHURCH HIMSELF

The Right Rev. Charles Arthur Nelson, Bishop of Long Island in the United Christian Church of America, has died in a long illness at the age of 44. Before he became a missionary of 1912 he was well known in boxing circles as "Battling Charlie Nelson" and had a high reputation as a fighter. He left the ring because in 1911 at the Pelican Athletic Club, Brooklyn, he injured his opponent, Willy Jones, so severely that for some time it was feared that Jones would die. Mr. Nelson, resolving never to fight again, went into the Church.

During the war he served as a chaplain in several United States army camps. Seven years ago he took over the former Methodist Church of Long Island when it was being used as a cinema, and, having been a carpenter, he retransformed it with his own hands into a church. He named it Grace United Church and was still its pastor at the time of his death.

PERSONAL TOUCH AT SAVINGS H.Q.

Women To Greet Callers

A reception room, decorated with flowers and staffed by women selected for their pleasant manners and alertness, is the latest development in "Brighter Post Office campaign."

The reception room has been introduced at the headquarters of the Post Office remittance and National Savings Certificate services in Manor-gardens, Holloway. "During the year half a million inquiries were made by letter or personal call at headquarters regarding Savings Certificates," an official of the Post Office said last month. "Hitherto members of the public calling there went to a counter, similar to those in the ordinary post office, where clerks did their best to assist them in their inquiries."

"The new women receptionists have been chosen from a staff of 800 girls, and thoroughly coached in the work and activities of the various departments. They will either deal with the callers personally or put them into touch with clerks, or with an officer able to deal with the inquiry. This will enable the work to be carried out expeditiously without interfering with the ordinary routine of the departments."

BRIDGE NOTES

Defending Your Contract

by Ely Culbertson

Ordinarily it can be laid down as a general principle that defending players should win every trick they can in order to defeat the opposing contract.

This is so self-evident that it scarcely requires statement. However, there are situations where the defending side should take the risk of giving the Declarer an overtrick in order to create a situation which may possibly bring about the defeat of the contract.

Mr. Louis H. Watson, who is one of the master Bridge players of the United States, recently defended a Slam contract by a most unconventional play on the hand below:

South, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable

North
S-K Q 8
H-Q J 7 6
D-J 7 4
C-10 8 3

West
S-7 6 2
H-9 5 4
D-K 8 5 3
C-K 9 2

East
S-J 9 3
H-10 8 2
D-Q 9
C-J 7 6 5 4

South
S-A 10 5 4
H-A K 8
D-A 10 6 2
C-A Q

The bidding:
South West North East
3NT Pass 4NT Pass
6NT Pass Pass Pass

The bidding as given above was certainly unconventional. The fact that neither North nor South has a suit of five cards in length makes the Slam contract rather hazardous.

Mr. Watson was seated West and opened fourth-best from the diamond King. The four was played from Dummy, and East quite properly played the nine. South won this trick with the Ten, and then ran four spades and four heart tricks. Mr. Watson was twice forced to discard, and boldly blanked the club King. South was not prepared for this strategy. He knew that Mr. Watson had three diamonds and one club left, and therefore counted on the King of clubs being in the East hand, and finessed the Queen. This was won with the King, and a diamond led, and the contract was defeated 1 trick.

It will be observed that this play would have been impossible had Mr. Watson discarded a diamond and retained two clubs. In that case South would have played the Ace of diamonds on the tenth trick, and another diamond would have forced Mr. Watson in the end to lead from the King of clubs into South's tenace in that suit.

In this particular hand there was no safe defence, but the bold policy adopted by Mr. Watson gave the one slight chance of success. The Declarer cannot be blamed for failing to detect Mr. Watson's clever ruse because his play would have followed identical lines and his club holding out included the King.

TWO PREMIER GAMES FOR TO-DAY

NAVY STRENGTHENED BY NEW ARRIVALS

MUCH disappointment is being felt in soccer circles over the postponement of the premier League encounter between the Royal Welch Fusiliers and the Chinese Athletic to-morrow, as next week's encounter between the new regiment and St. Joseph's is hardly likely to produce a test for the former or give any possible indication of their true form.

To-day's big soccer attraction will be the clash between the much augmented Royal Navy eleven and the Club de Recreo, which takes place on the Kowloon ground.

To-morrow the East Lancs come in from Camp to play South China "B" and an exciting struggle should ensue. In the third Division the East Lancs meet the Medical Corps and as both teams are fairly evenly balanced, the encounter should produce keen football.

Owing to the Volunteer Camp and the arrival of the new Regiment, the Club, Kowloon, and the Borderers have postponed their fixtures for this week-end.

"Rover's" forecast of the week-end soccer programme is as follows:—

A commission of the Football Association sat at Leeds yesterday to consider the case of Gallacher, Sunderland's Scottish International. At the conclusion the following statement was issued:—

"A commission, consisting of Mr. H. Greenwood (Sheffield), Mr. W. L. R. Hardcastle (Huddersfield), and Mr. Brook Hirst (Huddersfield), at the Queen's Hotel considered the complaint relative to the sending off of Gallacher, of Sunderland, in the match between Sunderland and Derby County at Sunderland on September 22. "After hearing all the evidence the commission were of opinion that they could take no action against Gallacher."

New York, October 24. In reply to the British Boxing Board of Control's letter asking for Freddie Miller's status in New York State, the New York State Athletic Commission emphatically announces that it does not recognise Miller as featherweight champion of the world.

Miller must first defeat a logical contender, such as the Mexican, Baby Arzemandi, says the Commission's reply.

Will Have To Defend Title In June

NO SERIOUS TRAINING YET

Mexico City, Nov. 19.

Max Baer, world's heavy-weight boxing champion, was ordered to bed here to-day with a badly infected arm which his physician considered serious enough to justify confining the Livermore lad.

Baer, who won his title last June by beating Primo Carnera, Italy's Man Mountain, has not been seen in real action since that time.

He has engaged in several exhibitions as well as acted as toast master in several New York night club. Recently he seconded "little brother" Buddy, all 230 pounds of him, in a Hollywood match, Buddy's fifth professional start.

Baer is not required by the New York Boxing Commission to defend his title until June, 1935 when a title bout must be held.

SCRUMMAGING RULE FLOUTED

LOOSE WORDING LEADS TO CONFUSION

NEW RULING WANTED IMMEDIATELY

(By J. P. Jordan)

A few months back our Rugby law-makers tackled a scrummage problem.

When they had finished they sat back satisfied and announced to the world that they had created a new law, which meant that when the ball is put into a scrummage it can be hooked only by the far foot of the middle man of the first row of the scrum.

They were wrong. Their intention was clear, but it has been left to Oxford University to find the loophole which is said to exist in every law.

OXFORD'S OUTSIDE FORWARD IS TAKING THE BALL WITH HIS OUTSIDE FOOT, AND HE IS NOT BREAKING THE LAW.

Oxford played a Welsh club in a match controlled by a Welsh referee. Their first forward used his outside foot, yet the referee took no action because he agreed with their interpretation of the law.

Others Will Follow

Now we shall have many clubs doing the same thing, and there is danger that in a little while we shall again be agitated over a question that seems to baffle Rugby law-makers.

As it stands, the law says that the ball, on being put into the scrummage, shall pass one foot of a front player on each side, before a foot shall be moved.

Oxford proved that it is possible to carry out the order yet hook with the outside foot of the first forward. It is all a matter of speedy action the moment the ball has passed the foot.

The idea of the law is there all right, but the clause that says no foot of the first three feet of the front row forwards shall be raised before the ball has passed the outside foot of the first forward was based on a theory that it was impossible for the outside man to move quickly enough to play the ball before it had reached the third foot.

Not So Obvious

The referees in their notes on the rule say: "It is obvious that he will be unable to play the ball until it has reached the far foot of the hooker," whom they presume to be the middle man of the row. I mentioned the matter to a referee. He was positive that his colleagues are right in their assumption. But it was so far from being obvious, when I watched Oxford, that the man was doing it regularly.

It all depends upon the pace at which the ball is put into the scrummage, and the referee is the sole judge whether the pace is fair or otherwise.

There was nothing unduly slow about the action of the scrum-half in the game I watched, and when other forwards have drilled themselves we shall have many outside men hooking with the outside foot and making the law look stupid.

What we want is a law which says clearly and firmly that the ball must pass three feet before it is touched by any foot.

As it is other clubs will follow the example and, legally, act in a way contrary to what was intended, and that means referees will be given new worries, there will be different interpretations by different men, and spectators and players alike will find fresh cause for irritation.

Some day, perhaps, we will get a rule which is clear and not one which starts off to say one thing and ends by saying something entirely different.

C. G. MACARTNEY RETIRES

Famous Test Player's Announcement

C. G. Macartney, the former Australian Test player, has announced that he will not play in grade cricket this season. As Macartney gave up first-class cricket some time ago, this new decision indicates that he has retired from the game altogether.

An all-rounder, Macartney toured England four times, and in 1926 he hit centuries in three successive Test innings. He played in 28 tests for Australia, against England, scoring 1,640 runs and taking 33 wickets.—Reuter.

DANIEL PRENN BEATS MIKI IN STRAIGHT SETS

TITLE HOLDER AND BERG TO MEET?
MATCH WITH ROSS
IN LONDON

MUST BEAT FRENCH HOLDER FIRST

JACK ("KID") BERG IS IN SIGHT OF ANOTHER WORLD
TITLE FIGHT—AND THIS TIME IN LONDON, WRITES THE
BOXING CORRESPONDENT OF THE LONDON DAILY TELE-GRAPH.

If he can beat Gustave Humery, the Frenchman who gained a surprise victory over Cleto Deatelli in Paris last Monday, Berg may be matched with Barney Ross, the American and world's light-weight champion.

It is possible that we may see this fight at Olympia next January. But everything, of course, depends on Berg beating Humery in a contest for the European title.

THIS QUICK CHANGE OF OUTLOOK FOR BERG FOLLOWS ON HIS BRITISH LIGHT-WEIGHT CHAMPIONSHIP SUCCESS OVER
HARRY MIZLER AT THE ALBERT HALL.

The new champion has many challengers, for the light-weight division is comparatively rich in talent in this country at the moment. As I stated recently, Berg was lucky to have been given the chance to fight for the title.

Chief among his challengers and,
in my opinion, most formidable, is Seaman Tommy Watson, of Newcastle, the former featherweight champion. In disposing with ease last week of another challenger, George Odwell, Watson staked his claim convincingly.

This would be a striking match in one respect: both are boxers who believe in intensive two-handed attack. But whereas Berg's is a windmill style, Watson hits straight, and hits with a force that starts from the heels.

Then there is Jimmy Walsh, of Chester, a promising featherweight, who is rapidly growing out of that class. Walsh is boxing at about 9st. 4lb., and would have to concede the other 5lb. to Berg.
But the similarity of Walsh and Mizler, in youth, lack of experience, and in style leads me to believe that he would not beat Berg.

Stewart's Strong Claims

Jimmy Stewart, of Liverpool, has the strongest claim according to records, for he has beaten Berg since he returned from America.
Norman Snow, the young Northampton bricklayer, who is under the same management as Berg, is also a challenger. And it must not be overlooked that Mizler, as the beaten champion, is entitled to ask for a return match.

Here is the foundation of a splendid eliminating tournament, and the promoter who would be bold enough to match in one night Mizler, Watson, Stewart, Walsh, Snow, and Billy Quinlan the Welsh champion, would have a magnificent show.

I think that Watson is destined to be our next light-weight champion. As a feather-weight he lost narrowly on points to Kid Chocolate for the world's championship in New York; and he has, if anything, gained in efficiency, speed, and punch since then.

KNOCKED OUT IN
40 SECONDSAfter Travelling 3,000
Miles For A Fight

London, Oct. 29.

Phil ("Red") Munro, the cruiser-weight boxer, travelled 3,000 miles from Canada for his first fight in Newcastle, and he lasted exactly 40 seconds!

He met Jack Casey, of Sunderland, in a contest which was scheduled for 12 rounds.

Casey, leaping from his corner, got a hard left to the body, which sent the Canadian staggering across the ring, and he followed up with a right close to the jaw which dazed Munro.

Retreating rapidly before Casey's onslaught Munro tried to jab, but in some lefts to the head, but was cautioned for using an open glove.

In the next second Munro was down on the boards from a fine right hook, which caught him full on the point of the jaw. He rose to his knees, but the referee counted him out.

Ground Alteration

The "Y" Ladies' team will meet the Hong Kong Ladies on the "Y" ground, King's Park, and not at Sookunpoo as originally fixed.
Their team is considerably altered from last week, Miss Blumenthal appearing in the forward line in place of Miss Trehair who has an injured ankle, while Miss Hickey moves across to left-half, and Miss Gardiner returns to her usual position at right-half.

The champions have a newcomer to their side in Miss N. McKenna, who has played at Home.

The third fixture is between the Schoolgirls and the Recreio Ladies on the C.B.A. ground, King's Park at 2.30 p.m. Miss K. Moir is an absentee from the Schoolgirls' team;
being replaced by Miss Stephenson,
but the Recreio are unchanged.

WOMAN'S RECORD AT BROOKLANDS124.14 M.P.H. For One Lap

London, October 12.

Mrs. Kathleen Petre, driving a super-charged Bugatti, yesterday established a new women's lap record for the Brooklands track. Her time was 80.24 sec., and the speed 123.14 miles per hour.

The record was previously held by Mrs. E. M. Wisdom, who intends to try and beat her own record to-morrow at the motor show meeting.

She will now have to improve on Mrs. Petre's new record, and, as this is the last meetings of the year, it is probable that the two women will compete to decide who is to hold the honour until next season.

TWO PLAYERS FOR WEST INDIES

D. C. H. Townsend (Oxford University) and Hollies (Warwickshire) have accepted invitations to accompany the M.C.C. team which is to tour the West Indies. It is probable that one more player will be included, making fourteen in all.

TEMME'S REWARD

E. H. TEMME, the London insurance clerk who swam the Channel from Dover to France last August in record time, was rewarded for his effort by the Mayor of Dover, who presented him with a gold cup.

Temme has also made the crossing from France to England and is the only person to have swum the Channel in both directions.

Some people have made a lot of money out of Channel swimming, but Temme, the best of them all, is an amateur, and beyond this gold cup and the notoriety it has brought him, he has not profited by his swims.

HYDER CUP PLANS

AMERICANS are already thinking of the Ryder Cup golf match next year, and I learn that it has been agreed to play it on the Ridgewood course, New Jersey.
There has not been a big tournament there for 20 years, but it should be much more suitable a place than the course at Ohio, which was used when our team last made the trip.

That course was close to the Cotton Line, the games were played in the height of a heat wave, and the conditions, plus some good American golf, allowed our men, no chance.

It was stated then that more equitable conditions would be ensured for the next visit, and this promise has been carried out by the selection of New Jersey.

Britain has never won the Ryder Cup in America. Is it too much to hope that the sequence will be broken this time?

"FINDING" OF CLARK

CRICKETERS generally received with regret the news of Frank Field's death. The old Warwickshire player was one of the most popular of first-class umpires, and a very efficient one, too.

But I wonder how many are aware that it was Field who was responsible for the discovery of Clark, the Northamptonshire and England fast bowler?

It was 13 years ago that Field told the Northants officials of the existence of a talented young bowler with a county qualification who was taking wickets freely for the Undercliff team in the Bradford League.

Northants took the tip and obtained the services of a top-class player of whose existence they were unaware.

IN DEMAND

DOUGLAS WHITEHEAD, the talented centre forward of Kingstonian, is once again attracting the attention of professional
"spotters."

One London First League club offered him maximum wages and received "No" for an answer, but they were swiftly followed by another London club with a similar offer.

MIKI'S FAREWELL MATCH

(By A. WALLIS MYERS)

LONDON, OCT. 27.

BOTH MATCHES IN THE SEMI-FINAL OF THE SURREY
COVERED COURT CHAMPIONSHIP AT DULWICH YESTER-DAY PROVIDED SURPRISES.

The contest between D. Prenn and R. Miki was expected to be an attractive struggle; actually the Pole beat the Japanese in two love sets in less than twenty minutes.

Then few spectators anticipated that D. N. Jones, the American express server, who had played an exciting match with Borotra last week, would find himself in jeopardy against L. E. Cater, the old Brightonian, who has represented Sussex county. Cater not only won a love set, but took four games in the deciding set.

SWIMMING GROWING
POPULARUndreamt Of Crowds
At Aquatics

THE SHIVERERS' RECORD

The crowds which now attend big swimming galas present a striking contrast to those of the old days, when champions had to race in small baths three feet deep at one end.

The erection of vast new pools,
such as those at Southport, Hastings, Wembley, and Brighton, has brought attendances undreamt of three or four years ago.

Thousands are now seen watching swimming events at Wembley, which under the old conditions would not have drawn 500. And the same increasing popularity of the sport is evident elsewhere.

H. E. Annison, the old swimming champion, who is now manager of the pool known as "S. S. Brighton," says that there is more enthusiasm among spectators there than he ever saw in his international days.

UNDEFEATED

The Shiverers' Swimming Club have made their headquarters at the Brighton pool, and they are a rather warm lot, especially at water-polo.

They are the undefeated champions of the Sussex County League and have won the title six times since 1927. As the club was not formed until after the war this is a very fine record.

Six of their first team water-polo players have been picked by Sussex, and though international honours have yet to be won, the selectors will eventually have to take notice of the Brighton men.

JEFF DICKSON AND
"NO-FOUL" RULE

Mr. Dickson has received the following letter from the Board:

"The Board (administrative stewards), at a meeting yesterday, had placed before them the various Press reports alleged to have been published under your authority that you would defy the B.B.C.
in regard to the question of the rules of boxing, and put into operation a so-called 'no-foul' rule at your next promotion at the Albert Hall.

"The Stewards decided that you be asked to appear before them at their next meetings, under regulation 17, paragraph 1, to explain your action in this matter."

Mr. Dickson stated yesterday that it had never been his intention to flout the Board. He said that he telephoned his London office from Paris, giving instructions that every boxer engaged at the Royal Albert Hall on Monday would have to wear a foul-proof protector.

His message, he said, was misconstrued, and a statement to the effect that the "no-foul" rule would operate, was issued.

Whitehead is a Scottish international who has made a permanent home in Kingston.
He is an ex-R.A.F. aircraftman who now has a good post with an aeroplane firm, and I do not think he will be tempted to change his status.

Miki's last singles match in this country—he is returning to Tokio next month—was his briefest. It also revealed him as a disciple of Vivian McGrath in that he was using both hands for his backhand returns, the new method necessitating, as in McGrath's case, the discard of a ball carried in the left hand. This ten-fingered defence was not a success, for there was no pace on the Japanese drive and Prenn could come to the net confident of an easy kill.

Prenn's service was almost automatically dominating, since Miki had no forcing shot to offer in reply. There was a sequence of love games in this remarkable match.

Cater's Fine Effort

Cater deserves every credit for his fine effort against Jones. He was playing at least fifteen better in the second set than in the first, and even if the American obviously let it go when Cater had broken his service twice, the English attack was shrewdly sustained.

Serving left-handed, Cater produced a fast spinning ball, and often followed it to the net. He was a confident volleyer and in his best phases made many fine thrusts on the rpm.

In the final set Jones braced and went to 4-1. Then he dropped his service from 40-15, two of his smashes failing to receive the benefit of the doubt from the umpire. Cater then carried his service effectively to love and Jones only just held his to reach 5-3.

Again, Cater struck back,
but Jones made no mistake about the tenth game. He banged his way home with three aces.

Mrs. King will meet Mrs. Pittman in the women's final. Miss Yorke could win only a couple of games against the covered court champion, who is finishing the year with a wealth of good shots.
Mrs. Strawson started well against Mrs. Pittman, leading 5-1, but as her length faded so Mrs. Pittman was able to impose her volleying strength, and once she had drawn level the battle was virtually over.

NOTTS COUNTY AND
VILLA MENDenial Of Offer For Talbot

There are many rumours in Birmingham of possible moves for Aston Villa players. The Villa secretary, emphatically contradicts a statement that Notts County have made an offer for Talbot. But it is suggested that Chelsea are anxious to obtain one or more of the Villa men.

The first thing the Villa will do when they have somewhat cleared their decks will be to angle for the best available outside right in the country.

London's Forecast
A forecast from London on the probable trend of the New York market, states—
Narrow movements are expected on Wall Street with prices tending to go lower. Not much business is anticipated owing to pessimistic developments in railroad issues overruling the improved industrial outlook.
Cotton is expected to open higher owing to the possibility of the Government arranging higher price for Home cotton and a lower price for exports. This is anticipated to cause support for October.
Wheat is expected to open steady. The weather is bullish in the corn belt and the cold wave is spreading. In the South-west, conditions have cleared. French news is conflicting.
Rubber is expected to open slightly higher.

NEW DEVELOPMENTS IN SURGERY

Operating On Heart
Patients To-day

BIG ADVANCES MADE

The great advances of surgery date from the comparatively recent time when the modern developments of the "aseptic" method made it possible to open regions of the body without the dreadful risks of blood poisoning as a matter of course. Abdominal surgery developed, aided in some ways by the catastrophes of war.

In the post-war period there has been an effect in many centres to attack diseases of the lungs by surgical means, and now there seems to be a possibility that even heart disease opens up a field where the surgeon can give valuable help.

The latest development is to remove the thyroid gland in cases of heart failure where all other means have been without effect. This appears at first sight to be a meaningless and almost barbarous attack by the surgeon upon a field where the physician alone has long reigned supreme.

Reports of work on these lines have been coming from America for some time, and at certain centres in Britain investigation of the method has been proceeding.

View of Prague. President Masaryk.

Dr. Thomas Garrigue Masaryk, the founder and only President of the Czechoslovakian republic, is said to be slowly ailing, and political observers believe he will not be able to serve much of his third successive term to which he was elected several months ago. Now 81 years old, President Masaryk has watched his "brain child" grow to manhood, with a powerful voice among nations, and serve as the last outpost of democracy in dictatorship-ridden central Europe. He resides most of the time in his huge castle in the capital, Prague.

Horst Wessel And His Song

Life History Of Young
Nazi Hero

IDOL OF HIS COUNTRY IN FIVE YEARS

A WEEK does not pass without mention in the German news of the Horst Wessel Song; never a day, or an hour, goes by without thousands of German throats giving it to the air. The foreigner in Germany finds no way of escape from it, writes Walter G. Bell in the Daily Telegraph.

Who was Horst Wessel, and what is his song, which with the rise of the Nazi Dictatorship has become a national anthem among seventy millions of people? Many Englishmen ask these questions.

Of the song itself an English translation is here given. There is a loss by translation, as is indeed inevitable. Its arrogance is not lost, but perhaps is less in evidence than might be expected. A patriotic song, should have arrogance—the supreme quality of The Marseillaise.

The German would never recognise himself in character, his first need in a song destined to become national, unless he was marching into battle, head high, clearing others out of the way, and the like—all to be found in the lines:

Probably the head from the German print reproduced is accurate, but though Horst Wessel died only in 1930, it is impossible for any writer of to-day to draw a sure portrait. The man, quite unknown at this death, has gone. In his place has arisen a legend.

The Horst Wessel Song
Their waving flag mid-erred
ranks of manhood,
The Storm Troops march with gallant step, heads high,
And comrades whom Reaction and Red Front have slaughtered,
In spirit march with us and we shall die.

For Brown battalions clear the streets of others;
Clear us a way and each Storm
Trooper cheer.

The Swastika brings hope to all our myriad brothers.
The Day of Freedom and of Bread is here!

For the last time Reveille has been sounded,
For battle see us stand in stern array.

Soon Hitler's flag shall wave o'er street unchallenged,
And Serfdom's days are doomed to pass away.

The first verse is then repeated.

Few facts about Horst Wessel are established beyond controversy. The son of an Evangelical parson, he was born on October 9, 1907, at Bielefeld, so was but 23 when his posthumous fame began. His parent had hoped that he would enter the Church.

In due course, he passed to the university, where he proved to be a youth of average ability. After leaving it he developed a flair for composing popular songs.

Horst Wessel was caught up in the political movements which divided his fellow-countrymen into bitterly hostile camps. At first he is said to have shown leanings towards Communism. But that true or not, in the autumn of 1926 he joined the Nazi party.

As commander of a Storm Troop section he went to live in a "Red" quarter of Berlin thickly infested by Communists, and for that reason considered by the Nazis to be an honourable outpost for their work. It would seem that the special task he set himself was to organise a Nazi "cell" there, on the Communist pattern. The Communists assert that he was the instigator of the Nazi terrorist activities against them in the district.

Innocently Betrayed
Horst Wessel lodged in the Judenstrasse with a working-class woman of mature years. A young German also figures in his tragic end, whose position is variously interpreted according to whether or not the interpreter is of Nazi sympathies. On January 14, 1930, these three were in the kitchen, when a small group of men, variously numbered, and Communists with little, if any, doubt, burst in and killed him.

At the time it was openly stated in the newspapers (then free) that the young woman was the actual, though innocent, cause of his death. The political version was that she had been a Communist worker, and had been influenced by Horst Wessel to desert that faith: Another version was that the whole affair was due to a lover's jealousy.

This last was the view taken by the prosecution at the trial which followed the crime. The accused, a man named Hoehler, who figured as Wessel's rival lover and fired the shot, was condemned not for murder but for manslaughter, and sentenced to six years.

Three people in all, if Hoehler be included, have paid with their lives for the murder of Horst Wessel. Since the Nazis came into absolute power a second trial has been staged. It took place on June 16 of this year, when three Communists were condemned for "joint murder" in having kept watch. Samuel Epstein and Hans Ziegler were sentenced to death and executed, and the third man, Peter Stoll, to seven and a half years' imprisonment.

YOUNG MURDERER'S REMORSE

Strong Recommendation
To Mercy

CINEMA CRIME TRIAL

John Frederick Stockwell, aged 19, a cinema attendant, was charged at the Old Bailey with the murder of Mr. Dudley Hoard, manager of the Palace Cinema, Bow, E.

He pleaded not guilty, but after the opening statement by prosecuting counsel, he altered his plea to one of guilty.

When Mr. F. Levy (defending counsel) made this announcement he added, "Having examined the case from every aspect the solicitor and I feel it would be a lamentable farce to go through a case of this nature to its bitter end with an inevitable result."

Mr. Justice Goddard—Have you received direct instructions from your client?—Yes, in writing.

The Judge (to Stockwell)—You understand what you are doing?—Yes.

Mr. Levy, addressing the court, said, "You have before you a boy of nineteen, who from the age of eleven had no protected childhood. His father was killed in action when he was one year old and his mother died when he was eleven. He was thrown upon the world and had to depend upon relatives."

"I believe that if some expression is made by the jury something may happen which will save this boy from the inevitable."

"It would be idle for me to address you further," he said. "In discharging a duty which has caused me great anxiety, I ask the jury to do what they can to save this young man."

After a short deliberation in Court, the foreman announced that they found Stockwell guilty, and strongly recommended him to mercy, "taking into consideration that he never received parental guidance."

The Judge—I will see that your expression of opinion is sent to the proper authority.

Asked if he had anything to say before sentence of death was passed, Stockwell replied, "Yes, I am deeply sorry for this tragedy."

Addressing Stockwell, Mr. Justice Goddard said, "If any ray of light is to be found in this dark and tragic story, it is that by your confession and the course you are now taking you are showing some remorse for a crime as terrible as any recorded, even in the grim annals of this Court."

He then pronounced sentence of death.

Mr. Edward Fall, Stockwell's solicitor, intends preparing a petition for a reprieve on the grounds of Stockwell's youth and the lack of parental control.

A LONDON FIRE OF 1490

Evidence Found In A
Bookbinding

The trustees of the British Museum have just acquired a number of new treasures. One of the most interesting is a hitherto unknown declaration printed in 1491 by Richard Pynson, one of the earliest English printers showing that the Convent of Crutched Friars beside the Tower of London had been destroyed by fire on Midsummer Eve, 1490.

The sheet of paper, which was recently found concealed in the binding of a book, was issued by Thomas White, Prior-General of the Order of Crutched Friars in England, detailing the indulgences granted to contributors towards the Convent's rebuilding fund.

The Friends of the National Libraries have presented to the Department of Manuscripts one of the only two known letters written by Cromwell ("Old Cromwell"), the painter. It is a long and racy composition, addressed from Norwich in 1816 to his pupil, James Stark, and is notable for its frank discussion of the painting of both master and pupil and its reference to "Our Norwich School," apparently the first known use of the term.

CAPTAIN COOK'S COTTAGE

Obelisk Unveiled On
The Site

A granite obelisk on the site of the cottage at Great Ayton, Yorkshire, where Cap. Cook, the explorer, is believed to have lived was unveiled last month by Mrs. Richard Linton, wife of the Agent-General of Victoria in London. On the same afternoon the cottage itself, which has been bought by the Victorian Government, was opened in Melbourne.

Owing to the difference in time between Melbourne and Greenwich, it was impossible exactly to synchronise the ceremonies, and the Great Ayton opening took place a few hours before the other.

Mr. Linton said that, while the cottage had been removed, it was going to serve a great purpose.

"I believe in strengthening the links which bind the Empire together," he said, "and I think it will be an inspiration to the rising generation of our part of the Empire to endeavour to emulate Capt. Cook's service for the good of the Empire."

Rid yourself of STOMACH TROUBLE and enjoy a Healthy Appetite

by taking Sanatogen

LACK of appetite is mostly due to stomach trouble, which in turn is usually a question of "nerves." Nerve weakness prevents the proper functioning of the stomach and intestines and it is only by strengthening the weakened nerves that you can restore the proper functioning of the digestive organs and so, in a logical way, regain a healthy appetite.

Every particle of Sanatogen will actually help to restore lost nervous vitality, because Sanatogen provides the nerve cells with phosphorus and albumin—the building materials of nervous energy.

"A noteworthy effect of Sanatogen is a better appetite which is generally perceived within three or four days after beginning this nerve-food," writes a London physician.

Start a course of this famous nerve-food to-day. Very soon your complaints will vanish, and thanks to the all-round strengthening influence of Sanatogen, you will feel and look a healthier and happier being.

Japanese Negotiations.

The lesson to be learned from the very contradictory and frequently absurd information sent to us about the negotiations, now going on in London, which will have so great an effect on the future of the Far East, is one that does not appear on the surface. It is simply the absurdity of rigorous Press Censorship and the manufacture of a public opinion based on ignorance of the relevant facts. The great difficulty of the Japanese negotiators is not to make a useful agreement, but to make an agreement of any kind that will not offend popular opinion and involve the Government in what would look like a recantation of former declarations or a betrayal of national interests.

It would be possible to count on the fingers of the countries in which at the present time any information unpopular with the Government can be freely published and discussed; but as John Morley said "things are what they will be; why then should we wish to be deceived?" Any competent observer looking at events from an outside point of view, like Mr. Saito, the Japanese Ambassador at Washington, who recently made a very frank speech on the subject, cannot fail to notice how unnecessary is much of the present suspicion and ill-will which Japan has managed to arouse against herself. When the military party seized the reins and ran away with the embassies as well as with the military and naval services, a method of "blood and iron" diplomacy which scorned to explain either to outsiders or to their own people was adopted. The Japanese Army was trained by German officers; and the Bismarckian tone of speech roused reminiscences of similar claims to dominance which at once set the teeth of formerly friendly Powers on edge. The first result was that large increases of Army and Navy votes were required, and they had to be justified by giving the impression that the rest of the world was hostile and envious, and preparing for an attack which could only be met with an intensive extension of armaments. Hence a strict censorship of news backed up with Japanese thoroughness by communiques from the official spokesman, and a campaign of broad-casting tendentious accounts of foreign affairs, which have left the ordinary citizen with no means of forming an accurate opinion of what can and what cannot be done. It is this situation that the negotiators have to keep in mind not only in their statements to the Press, but what is more serious, in discussing plans with other negotiators who are not so ignorant as they would like to suppose.

One absurdity is the discussion of mere numbers of ships as though Navies were built by mathematicians and not by practical statesmen who are thinking all the time of what their Navy may be called upon to do. The British Navy was largely reduced without any treaty at all at the end of the war, because the removal of the threat of German aggression greatly decreased the need for defence in home waters. In the same way limitation to a further extent became possible because the five treaties made at Washington in 1922 decreased probable danger in the Pacific. The result was that Japan had a security which no ship-building programme without the same guarantees is likely to better. One can trace lines of thought as simple facts such as this are recognised, in the demands reported from day to day. The five treaties are not to be considered as interconnected. Why? Why should the other Powers agree to be bound by only such parts of a general settlement as happen to suit Japan, while Japan denounces her obligations "that made the quid pro quo"? Then comes the recognition that equality with Great Britain and the United States will after all not mean equality when the two act together. So we are old that Japan will only make unilateral agreements with either, but on no account sign a multilateral treaty. The object of course is to drive a wedge between the two Powers whose interests are practically identical. Why should they agree to accept a proposal of which the mischief-making possibilities are so obvious?

It is quite clear of course that the present Government is anxious to recover her old reputation as a good neighbour—to use Mr. Saito's own word—but does not feel quite ready yet to avoid the incompatible pose of Ajax defying the lightning. There is still plenty of time before the treaties lapse. It is quite unnecessary to take too seriously these preliminary manoeuvres for position.

"RESTFUL" HOLIDAY

Mr. Winston Churchill, who recently returned from his three-weeks cruise in the Mediterranean, had what he calls a "restful holiday."

During his cruise he visited Athens, Rhodes, Crete, Jerusalem, Cairo, Naples, Herculaneum, Rome and other cities.

His favourite was Petra, the Syrian town which inspired the line "a rose-red city half as old as time."

During his cruise Mr. Churchill painted six pictures, completed the scenario of his film of King George's reign, and wrote more than 30,000 words of a new autobiography.

For a man who will be sixty on St. Andrew's Day this is energetic if profitable idling.

TALE OF TWO CHANCELLORS

Lord Snowden, in the second volume of his autobiography, gives a new version of a Churchill story.

He says that when Mr. Baldwin, in 1924, offered Mr. Churchill the Chancellorship, Mr. Churchill assumed that it was Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

It only slowly dawned on him during the conversation that Mr. Baldwin was offering him the Exchequer.

Another version is that Mr. Churchill was under no such misapprehension. He bounced into the room of a well-known politician, dropped into a chair and exclaimed triumphantly, "I'm Chancellor!"

The politician (probably knowing all about it) looked up languidly from his desk and said: "Oh! Duchy of Lancaster; very good!"

Your Daily Smile!

An autograph collector once wrote to General Sherman asking for his signature and a lock of his hair.

He received the following unsigned reply:—"The man who has been writing my autographs has left, and my orderly is bald, so I cannot comply with your request."

A Limited Field
He: "You are always wishing for what you haven't got."
She: "Well, what else can one wish for?"

Experienced
Editor: "Do you know how to run a newspaper?"
Applicant: "No, sir."
Editor: "Well, I'll try you. I guess you've had experience."

THE ART OF GROWING OLD HAPPILY SPECTRE WORSE THAN THE REALITY

OLD AGE TIME OF REST

(By Silas K. Hocking)

The novelist, who is in his 85th year

THE spectre of old age is generally worse than the reality. The fear of it gradually vanishes the nearer we approach it. Poets, not novelists, dramatists have done their best to make old age appear unlovely and even hideous. The old man is represented as being bleary-eyed and toothless, with knees and shoulders bent, legs unsteady, hands gnarled, and a voice like the creak of a raven.

In reality—speaking generally—that is not true.

I was walking along Parliament-street not long ago with a man who revealed to me that he was ninety-five. His back was not bent, nor were his steps unsteady. He walked firmly and briskly, with head erect and chin thrust out.

He appeared to be interested in most things; the movements of the time, in the political situation, in the state of Europe, and in the fate of civilisation.

Old age has its tragedies no doubt—but so has every other period of life. No one can wholly escape the ills to which flesh is heir, but to imagine that old age is the quintessence of all that is a ghastly and frightening human experience is to make a profound mistake.

Hence I like to think of the charm of old age—of its restfulness and peace after the storms have spent their fury. Of the quiet backwater sheltered from the wind, where, rich in garnered knowledge, and undisturbed by the fretful, noisy crowd, one can meditate in quietness, and live over again the sweetest moments that life has given.

Satisfying Charm
Just as the closing hours of a summer's day are often the most beautiful and most restful, so the closing years of a long and busy life may yield the deepest content and provide the most satisfying charm.

All the beauty of the world is not in the springtime; nor in the hot and sultry days of summer. Autumn is often richest in colour, and winter has a beauty unknown to all the other seasons.

Life is like the seasons, and each season has its own particular charm. Hence to look forward with fear and distress to the coming winter—to imagine that old age can yield us nothing but pain and anguish, is to reveal a timid and unheroic spirit and to make even the brightest days dark with forebodings that probably will never come true.

Rest is sweet only to the tired. If we were never tired we should never know the delight of relaxing our limbs and laying our heads on a pillow of down. After a hard day's work, or a long tramp over hill and dale, who has not said as he has thrown himself into his easy chair, "This is good. This is delightful. This is blessedness deep and satisfying."

Old age is essentially a time of rest and relaxation. The scarred and weather-beaten veteran takes off his helmet, removes his heavy armour, gets rid of his mud-clogged boots, and wrapping his dressing-gown round him, and pushing his tired feet into his chair with a sigh of content.

Outside the bitter wind may rave, and the pitiless rain beat against his window panes, but he does not mind. He only feels sorry for those who are still exposed to the storm.

Eventide Of Life Enjoyed

There may be a few old people who would like to fight life's battles over again—endure the pain of disappointed hopes, and thwarted ambition, see their dreams fade like summer clouds, or more rarely feel the momentary ecstasy and thrill of a battle fought and victory won.

But, speaking generally, the quiet and calm of eventide are much more to their liking. They enjoy the rest after toil, the peace after strife, and are content to see the new generation putting on the armour that they have laid aside, and are grateful that they have done their job and earned their rest.

Not in all cases, I admit. A happy old age depends on what has gone before it. We reap in large measure what we have sown, or what was sown by our forebears. There are factors which go to the shaping of our lives for which we are not responsible. Inherited temperaments, weaknesses, disposition which mar the beauty not only of old age but also of every period of life.

Yet how much we can do for ourselves if we only try!

Having a hobby is vastly important, and a hobby of some kind is surely within the reach of all. The man who retires from business and who has never had a hobby of any sort is in rather a pitiable condition. Nothing can be more boring, or even soul-destroying, than to sit twiddling one's thumbs with nothing to do. No wonder that such people become peevish and irritable and pessimistic, and are a nuisance to themselves everybody else.

Friendship Of Young

Perhaps the greatest thing of all in producing a delightful old age is to cultivate the friendship of the young. We keep young by entering into the spirit of youth. We can find infinite pleasure in sharing their pleasures and in looking at life from their point of view.

I sometimes meet old men who tell me that they cannot get on with the younger generation at all—don't understand it. Don't know what will be the end of them.

There are silly, frivolous, adulated, spineless young men and women in every generation, but the quality of the mass is, I think, finer than ever it was. They are not really at enmity with the old. They want our help, our sympathy, our encouragement. They have a rough road to travel, a hard battle to fight.

If we show ourselves friendly they will be glad of our friendship. And their friendship will enrich us, and be an inspiration. The old and the young fraternise. They were meant to do so. The one is the complement of the other. The young and the middle-aged will not be afraid of old age when they see the octogenarians as blithe and cheerful as they are themselves—and perhaps a little more so.

BRUTAL CRIME AT HAPPY VALLEY

Inquiry Commenced At Central Magistracy

TRACTOR DRIVER'S DEATH

Sitting as Coroner at the Central Magistracy yesterday afternoon, Mr. W. Schofield commenced an inquiry into the circumstances surrounding the death of Fu Kit, a tractor driver, employed at the Golf Club, Happy Valley, whose body was discovered with multiple injuries on the morning of September 5.

The jury empanelled consisted of Messrs. L. D. Purves (Foreman), L. C. de R. Sousa and A. M. Tye. During the proceedings Mr. T. Murphy, Assistant Director of Criminal Intelligence (Crime), informed the Coroner that the Police were expecting to make an arrest in the very near future.

Dr. R. S. Beagle, who held the post mortem examination on the body, said it was that of a male about 48 years of age. The body was identified by Young Yui-san and Tsang Chuen as that of Fu Kit. After further evidence, the hearing was adjourned until Tuesday afternoon.

COST OF UTILITY PROPAGANDA

$30,000,000 Per Annum
On Seeking Goodwill

WALL STREET PROSPECTS

New York, To-day.
A very important Wall Street official, in an interview with the United Press, has expressed the opinion that a sustained market advance is possible without a material increase in trading volume.

Favourable factors yesterday were that steel scrap prices have advanced in Chicago, Philadelphia and Youngstown, and prices in some districts are above last year, and that the Retail Drygoods Association has reported that the store sales for 70 cities during the first half of November were 9.8 per cent. above last year.

An unfavourable factor was that the Federal Trade Commission, which is assailing the propaganda of the utility companies, has reported that the companies spent $30,000,000 annually seeking goodwill.

S. E. Levy and Company's Report in their market report, Messrs. S. E. Levy and Company, correspondents for Messrs. White, Weld and Company, New York state:

"Stocks: The market has finally emerged from a long flat area with an increase in volume of trading on the upside. The market should work higher unless or until new selling appears in Railroad and Utility issues. Business done: 1,130,000 shares."

STRANGE TRAGEDY IN BUNGALOW

Burglar's Heart Pierced
By Spear

STRUGGLE WITH AGED MAN

An astonishing affair, which ended in tragedy, occurred early one morning last month in a bungalow at a lonely spot known as Hightown, beyond Cave Hill, Belfast.

In the bungalow there lived alone an old man, William Greer. He was wakened by a noise in the kitchen of the bungalow and went to investigate. At the kitchen door he was started by the cry "Hands up!" from a man.

Mr. Greer seized an Indian spear, which he kept for both ornament and protection.

In the scuffle which followed, the sharp point of the spear entered the heart of the stranger, who fell dead. He has been identified as John Orr, of Ballyclare.

After the tragedy the old man dressed and walked to his son's house in Belfast. He then informed the police, and when they reached the bungalow with the ambulance they found Orr dead on the floor.

From appearances outside the bungalow it is believed that Orr had an accomplice, who fled. Greer was formally charged with murder but later was released.

EXPERIMENT WITH CODDLED COWS

No More Productive
Than Others

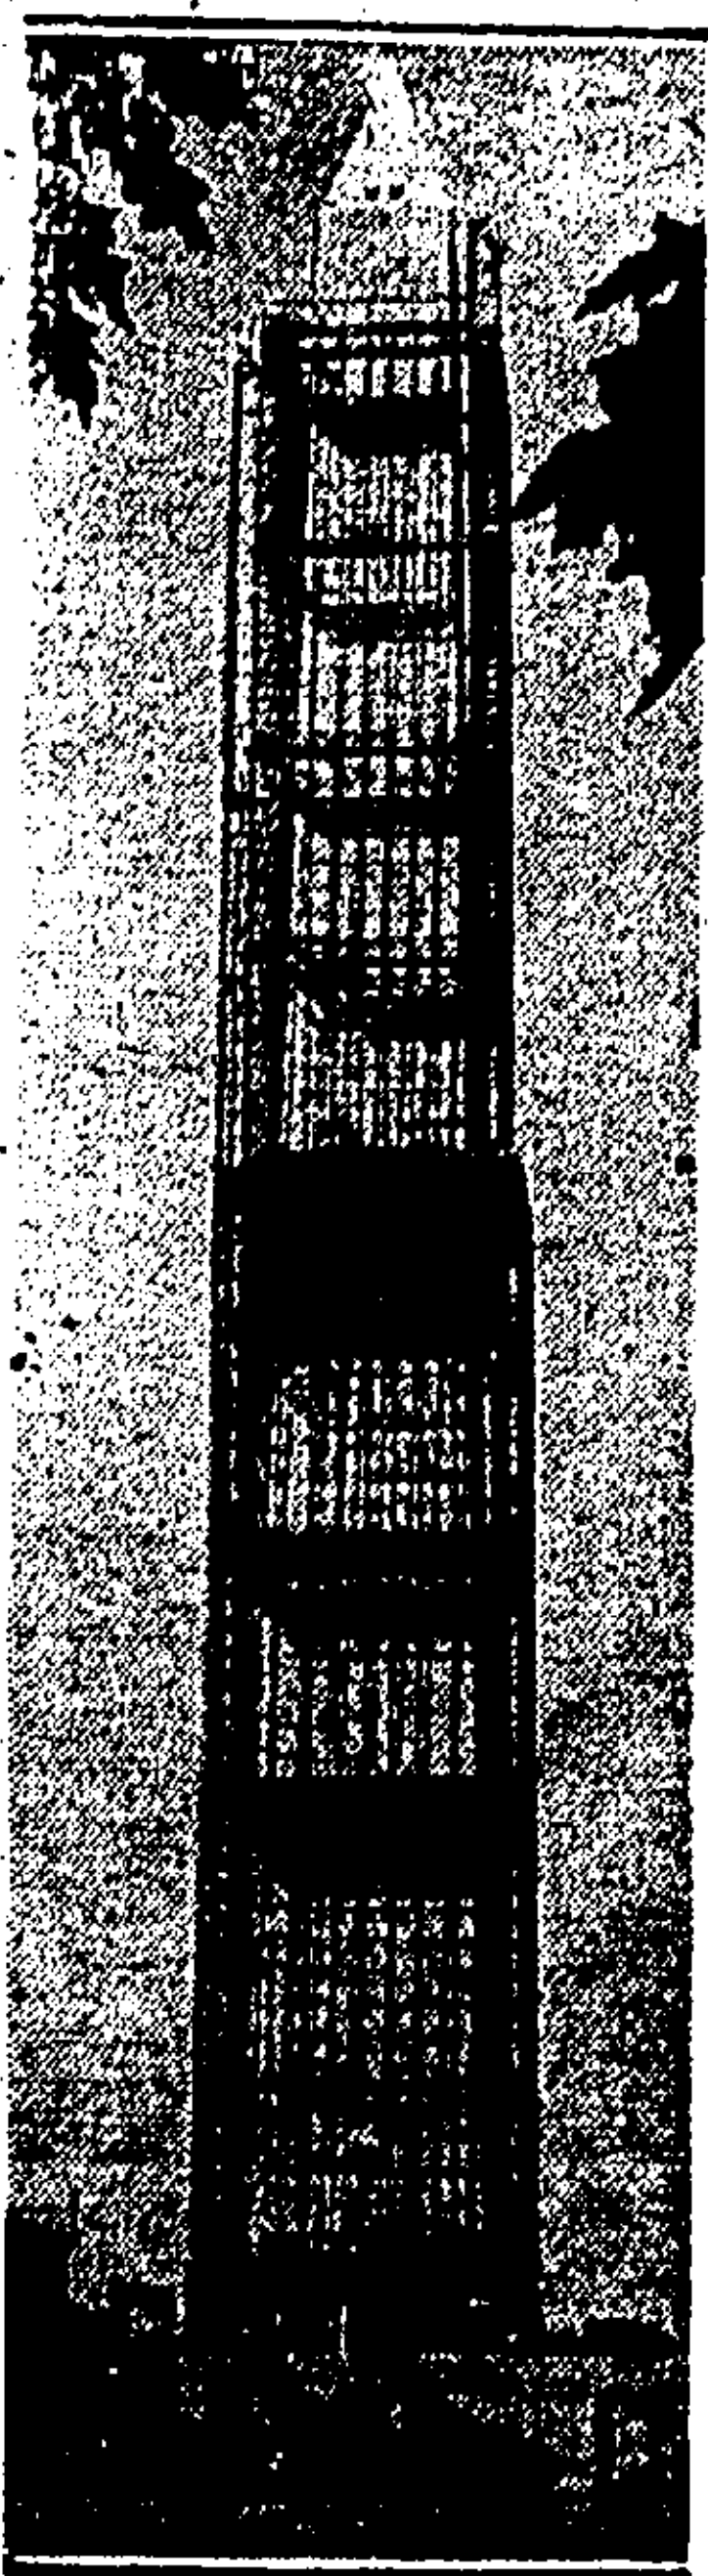

Davis, Calif.

On the Pacific coast it doesn't make much difference if dairy cows are exposed to the elements during the winter. As long as they are given plenty to eat, they will continue to produce.

This is the conclusion of Mr. Arthur Folger, superintendent of advanced registry tests in the animal husbandry division in the branch of the college of agriculture of the University of California here.

One group of cows was fed according to production and between milkings turned into a large covered yard bedded with straw. A second group was fed in the same manner but turned into an open, wire-fenced and unpaved corral. The third group received all the food the cows would eat and placed in an exposed corral.

During the first winter, of normal severity, the sheltered cows and wind, those under shelter did show the greatest loss in production. In the last, and mildest winter, the sheltered cows showed a smaller loss. But with rain ample feed is given.

Cleaning and repairing the Washington monument is as much of an engineering job as was the original job of erecting it. The picture provides a unique view of the world-famous shaft in bandages, after a "face-lifting" operation.

"FEW PEOPLE CAN READ"

Lord Mersey On Books
And Travel

DIFFICULTIES OF CHINESE

Reading and travelling were two of the greatest pleasures in life, declared Viscount Mersey when he spoke recently as guest of honour at the Authors' Club. Sir Basil Clarke presided.

Lord Mersey recalled his early travels in the East, when he journeyed slowly over difficult country on horseback, and he wondered whether one did not get better value going at three miles an hour than at three miles a minute. "People who travel quietly get a great deal more pleasure and interest out of life."

He said that the late Lord Curzon once advised him to learn everything about a country before going there, and not to waste time in the country learning the elements.

Linguistic Problems
Another thing he had found for himself was the necessity for learning the language of a country one proposed to visit. This, however, was not always easy.

"To learn Persian is comparatively easy. To learn Turkish is very difficult," continued Lord Mersey. "But when it comes to Chinese it is quite a different proposition. You have no alphabet and you have various tones. Say a word one way and it means 'cold.' Say it another way and it means 'dragon.'"

EASY VICTIM FOR AUTOGRAPH

Yugoslavian's Tribute
To Roosevelt

WASHINGTON

Milorad Raitchevitch, a Yugoslav, who spends his time travelling round the world obtaining the autographs of celebrated men and women, has secured the signature of President Roosevelt.

He says the President was one of his "easiest victims." "It took me only ten minutes to enter the White House, meet Mr. Roosevelt, and get his signature in my book," said Raitchevitch.

"I have spent several weeks getting the signatures of lesser dignitaries."—Reuter.

INDUSTRY'S USE FOR THE FILMS

Growing Demand For Moving Pictures

The film is revolutionising British industry.

For industrial research, the exact recording of manufacturing achievements and secret processes, and the training of staff, the film is becoming all important.

Now the film has become the essential instrument of engineers, shipbuilders, motor manufacturers, railways, and those interested in oil, rubber, tobacco, brewing, catering, beauty products, and a host of other industries.

A few days ago the story of how L.M.S. railwaymen from Bristol to Inverness are being shown "the other man's job" by films was told. So great has the demand for the film in industry become that British film organisations are establishing special industrial film units.

Gaumont-British for instance, devote their subsidiary company, Gaumont-British Equipment, to the production of films such as the Southern Railway's record of the construction of the Southampton graving dock, from mud flat to Royal opening.

Giant Liner's Film
When the Cunard-White Star liner, the Queen Mary, is ready for her trial trip, a film dossier of her building and every difficult and important piece of engineering and ship construction, carefully "shot," will repose in the offices of Messrs. John Brown.

Completed liners are not the only large-scale "jobs" to be considered worthy of a film record. One firm who devote themselves to the production of propellers have their film files for every secret process. And an important firm of dock gate manufacturers also have their animated documents.

Nor is record the most important function of the industrial film. Prospective "Nipples" employed by Messrs. J. Lyons and Co. attend film classes in the art of laying knives and forks, balancing loaded trays and other restaurant serobatics. And if instruction in the making of hard-centre chocolates be required, a film is at once forthcoming.

The development of instructional, research, documentary, welfare and "safety" films is exercising the minds of the directors of Imperial Chemical Industries. One film of the chemical spraying of orange trees has been shown in nearly every village in Portugal, and the possibility of instructing native agriculturists in eastern and near-eastern countries by film is being considered.

DRAMATIST PASSES

London, To-day.—Sir Arthur Pinero, the famous dramatist, died yesterday in the London Nursing Home at the age of 79.—British Wireless Service.

To-day's Short Story.

Sanctuary

By Frank
H. Shaw

MR. HORACE BENTWELL took the air outside the cafe of the Hotel Internationale, there in the plaza at San Xavier. From time to time he also took liquid refreshment, sipping daintily and appreciatively at a Dubonnet, which was the most he allowed himself at that hour of the day.

He savoured the sweets of liberty. Malagos was the one remaining republic in Central America where extradition treaties do not carry any weight. He had been in the sparkling city a full week, and the sunshine agreed with him. Dressed in faultlessly cut ponce, a Panama tipped back from his red and glistening forehead, he delicately pierced a cigar that would, for price, have supported a working-class family in faraway England for two days, and lit it with a connoisseur's appreciation. He had, he reflected, worked things to perfection.

Sitting there, watching the colourful kaleidoscope of San Xavier life, he made a mental review of recent years. A waiter brought him that morning's copy of La Prensa de San Xavier, but Mr. Bentwell knew no Spanish, and the headlines had no interest for him. He tipped the waiter a debased dollar and smoked serenely on. He half-closed his eyes against the dazzle of a tropical sun on cement pavements.

Vast palm-trees rustled soothingly in a hot wind, and a fountain splashed gaily. Gaudy parrots cackled in tree-tops, and vivid colour flashes darted amongst the luxuriant foliage of the central garden of the Plaza Grande.

Different, all this, Mr. Bentwell thought, from the dingy greyness of London's busy hustling streets. Peace here, safety. If fools like to risk their fortunes on hectic speculation, why not? He had lived precisely to oblige such fools. Fools who thought that twenty per cent. was a perfectly safe interest on investments—one was born every minute. They never learnt the lesson. And such as Mr. Bentwell had instructed in the elements of high finance were now—what? Facing starvation? Well, wasn't all life a war?

MONDAY'S STORY

Monday's story will be
"Left To Cuthbert" by Strawson Fletcher

Mr. Bentwell chuckled smoothly to himself. People flocked past, chattering joyfully in fluent Castilian. Maybe it was their sheer happiness and interest in one another that made Mr. Bentwell of a sudden feel slightly lonely.

He must, he reflected, learn the lingo and do it quickly. Until his wife came out to join him he would, he realised, have really no one to talk to. No one to explain to that he was a clever, clever man, who had dodged the consequences of financial jugglery far more craftily than any other of the notable brotherhood. Look at Barry Gay, for instance—he was serving a fourteen-years term. It was true that Cole Gainsforth had got off with three years' penal servitude, but it was doubtful if Cole would last out even so long, with his heart fattened up with high living. But for himself, he had played a wonderful hand. There had not been a loophole for danger until the ultimate exposure, and by the time that came he was handsomely away, en route for San Xavier, hiding his trail with well-planned skill.

His gleanings, from a too-confiding public, had been well placed in negotiable securities in foreign countries. France had most of them, and France was still on the gold standard. People, ordinary people, decided Mr. Bentwell, were fools. A man got up in the market places and offered them a handsome return for their savings and they flocked to force the money on him! Well!

And now there was all this pleasurable dolce far niente awaiting him. Malagos was a pleasant country; he intended to buy a property there, settle down finally on his winnings, and become a valued citizen. He registered a mental vow with himself not to try to take the Malagosans' savings from them, indeed. There wasn't another country to which he could travel with promise of security!

"Boss, you're English, ain't you?" mumbled an unexpected voice at Mr. Bentwell's shoulder. He controlled an instinctive start. He suddenly felt that he liked to hear his own tongue again, and not the clipped argot spoken by such as he had already encountered in San Xavier. He looked up and half-way round. He laughed.

The dirtiest, shabbiest, most forlorn beachcomber he had ever imagined stood there, shuffling one sandalled foot over the other. A shocking specimen indeed, he was. Apart from the curly, untamed beard smothering his face to the eyes, and the tufts of hair protruding from the crown of a shameful hat, the man was grimy with dirt; his only wear was a tattered undervest, a pair of thrice-patched dungaree trousers, and the fragmentary zapatos on his lean feet.

"And what if I am English?" Mr. Bentwell asked guardedly. "Why, then, Chief, you might make out to lead a poor bloke a hand if so be you're English," suggested the beachcomber, and the real mendicant's whine sounded in his voice. "I've had hard luck. You'd never believe it. And these beggones here—think they'll give a white man a chance to live? Not they!"

MURDER CASE WITH NO BODY

Convicted Man's Appeal Not Upheld

LORD HERWART ON "ODD OMISSION"

The "murder without a body" case came before the Court of Criminal Appeal last month, as briefly outlined in telegrams at the time.

Thomas Joseph Davidson, 38, poultry farmer, of no fixed address, was sentenced to death at the Central Court for the murder of his eight years' old son. He was found guilty of jumping into a canal with the child and afterwards leaving the body on a burning refuse dump at Stockley (Middlesex). His appeal was dismissed.

He had been recommended to mercy by the jury.

Davidson was in the dock in charge of three warders.

Mr. Frederick W. Wallace, who appeared for Davidson, said that a witness had alleged that, on three occasions, he saw Davidson with the boy, but apart from that, no trace of the child's body had since been discovered.

Lord Hewart—Is it not rather odd that, at the trial, nobody seems to have drawn the attention of the judge to the fact that the corpus delicti had not been found?

Mr. Wallace confessed that he had to decide the matter and thought it better not to make the submission at the trial because he was confronted with three different detailed "confessions" by the prisoner.

Lord Hewart—It placed the judge in a difficult position when the main point was not brought to his notice.

Mr. Wallace said that later Davidson retracted these statements and gave an explanation to the jury why they had been made.

The "Confessions"

"The first point I desire to make," continued Mr. Wallace, "is that this is a peculiar case in which a circumstantial allegation by the Crown, consisted of 'confessions' made by Davidson, and that, apart from the evidence which emanated from the man himself, either before or during the trial, there was not the slightest evidence of what is legally called the corpus delicti. It has been held that an unequivocal confession is sufficient in such a case as this."

Mr. Justice Avey said he recollected prosecuting in a case in which a journeyman baker was alleged to have killed another man and placed the body in an oven.

"Nothing remained but a bone or two," his Lordship remarked, "and they, of course, could not be identified. There was no other evidence of the disappearance of the body. However, the man was convicted."

Mr. Wallace said his second point was that the judge did not put all the prisoner's retractions clearly to the jury in the summing-up.

Mr. Eustace Fulton having replied for the Crown.

The Lord Chief Justice, announcing that the appeal failed, said the jury were entitled to come to the conclusion they had. Although the prisoner retracted at the trial the confessions he had made earlier, he did admit that he had seen the boy dead.

In those circumstances the proof that the boy was dead did not rest upon unsworn testimony, but on sworn evidence given by Davidson at the trial.

The Law Of England

The law upon that matter had been accurately stated in "Halsbury's Laws of England." That authority stated:

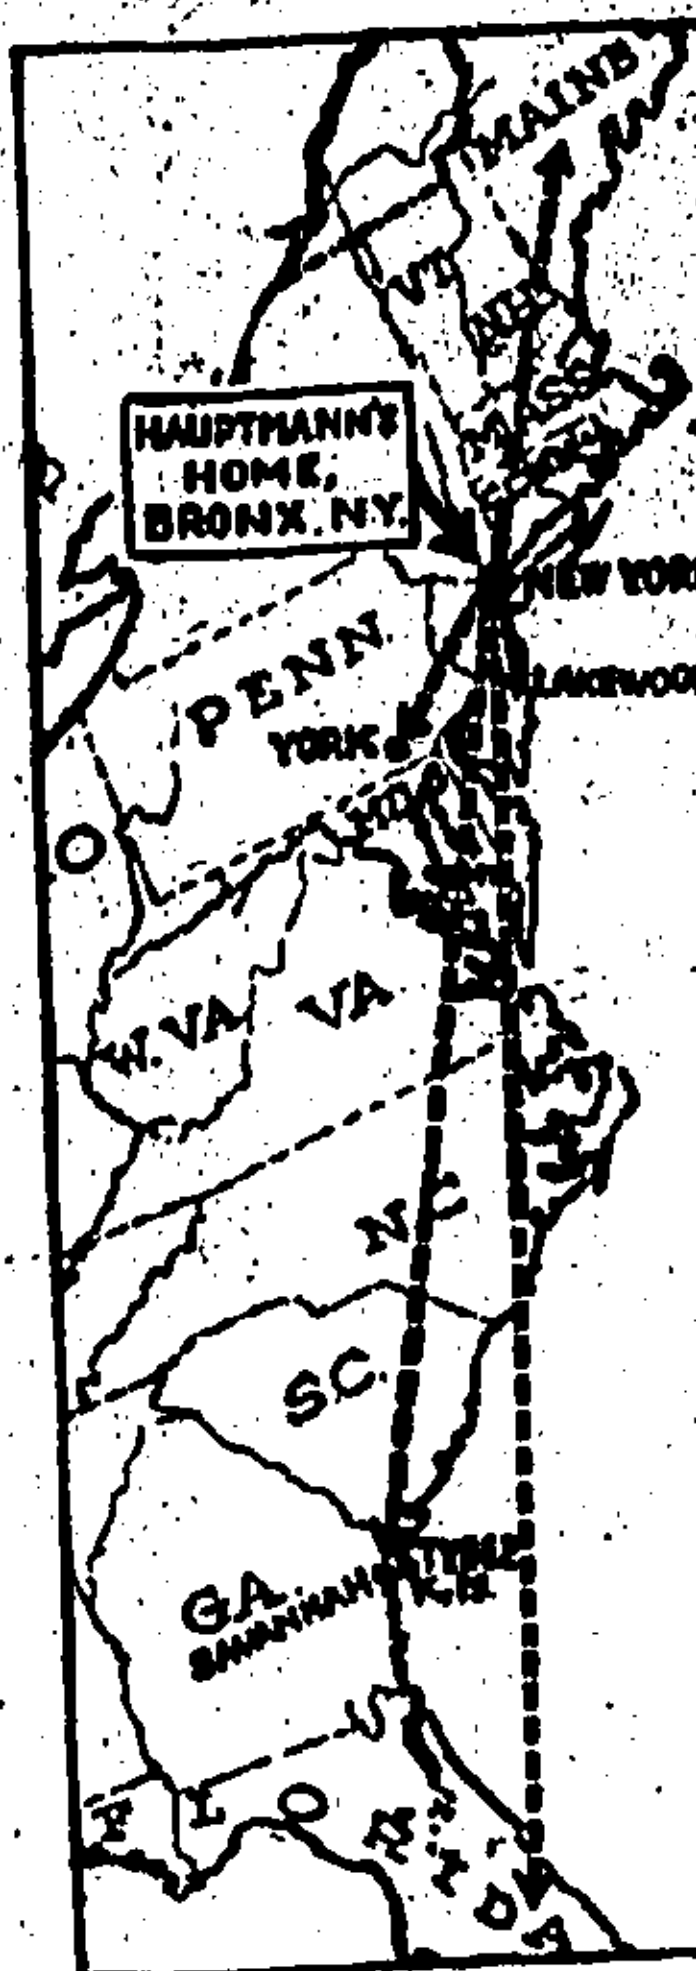

"Where no body, or part of it, has been found, then the person accused shall not be convicted of murder or manslaughter unless there is evidence either of the killing or of the death of the person alleged to have been killed."

"In the absence of such evidence there is noonus upon prisoner to account for the disappearance or non-production of the person alleged to be dead."

In this case, said Lord Hewart, it was unfortunate that the attention of judge at the trial was not pointedly drawn to the absence of the corpus delicti. Had his attention been so drawn one could hardly doubt that he would specifically have put the question to the jury.

"Are you satisfied that this child was dead?"

And, in view of the evidence given by Davidson himself, apart

This map shows the goings and comings of Bruno Richard Hauptmann after April, 1932, when he is alleged to have collected the Lindbergh ransom. The photograph reveals him enjoying himself at the beach with his own child on one of these trips.

DR. BARNES ON MIRACLES

No Breaches Of Laws Of Nature

The Bishop of Birmingham, preaching before the University of Cambridge last month, discussed miracles, "psychological" and "material."

He declared his acceptance of the former, which he defined as "mind-states which reveal the active presence of God."

But, Dr. Barnes added, adequate evidence for the existence of so-called laws of Nature "was not forthcoming."

"That view of the extent and development of the Universe and of this earth which is the result of scientific inquiry is now accepted by all but ecclesiastical cranks," he said.

"I personally believe that the mind of man has so specially developed that we can, albeit most imperfectly, understand the purpose of creation and the character of the Creator: there is thus some community of Nature between God and man."

"I myself have no doubt that God reveals Himself to those who wait upon Him. Were this feeling not both general and with some basis in truth, the habit of prayer might be expected to cease."

"Thus I accept, what one may call 'psychological' miracles; mind-states exist which reveal the active presence of God. But adequate evidence for the existence of material miracles—breaches of so-called laws of nature—is not forthcoming. We may grant that God can work such miracles; the evidence that He does so is lacking."

DR. INGE FORGETS

Why He Was Absent From Oyster Feast

Dr. Inge, who retired from the Deanery of St. Paul's on October 2, to live in rural Berkshire, was to have responded to a toast at Colchester oyster feast, but he failed to appear. The mayor, Alderman Benham, later received a letter from him stating:

"I am overwhelmed with shame and disappointment. I have been looking forward to it more than I can say, and then in this place, Brightwell, where all days are alike, I actually mistook the day of the week. I can only ask you to forgive me for my rudeness, and to accept my assurance that it is I who am punished for my carelessness."

from the rest of the evidence there can be no doubt what the answer of the jury would have been.

"It remains unfortunate," the Lord Chief Justice concluded, "that the topic was not expressly raised."

"In all the circumstances it can not be said that the summing-up was open to criticism or that the verdict was one to which the jury were not entitled to arrive."

ENGLISH PEOPLE IN EXPERIMENTS

Not Willing To Be Made The "Subjects"

TOO INDIVIDUALISTIC

"Englishmen are too individualistic to appreciate the use of either themselves or their children for medical experiment."

This suggestion was made as the explanation of why Britain tended to lag behind others in large-scale immunisation experiments, even though British scientists might have been responsible for the necessary laboratory work.

The question is raised by the present position in regard to whooping cough research. Two English scientists, Dr. A. D. Gardner, of the Oxford University Pathological Laboratory, and Mr. P. H. Leslie, were able more than two years ago both to identify a particular strain of virus as having special resistance-building activity and to describe a reliable method of diagnosing whooping cough when developed.

Tests In America

This double research paved the way for a practical test of the efficacy of immunisation against this disease. Yet it was left to Austria and America to make the necessary tests, as many as 500 children being used in the latter case.

"It is clear that recent work abroad on the specific control of whooping cough shows great promise," comments the "Lancet." "It is true that it owes much to English workers and, given the chance, English workers are ready and willing to repeat and extend it."

"But how is it possible for immunologists in Britain to assess at first hand new advances in the control of this or any infection unless opportunities are provided fully and freely in the interests of the public health?"

Ministry's Attitude

Dr. Gardner, commenting on this, said: "I should certainly agree that such clinical tests are more difficult in Britain than in many other countries. English people are more individualistic in their attitude to any suggestion that they should be made the subject of experiment."

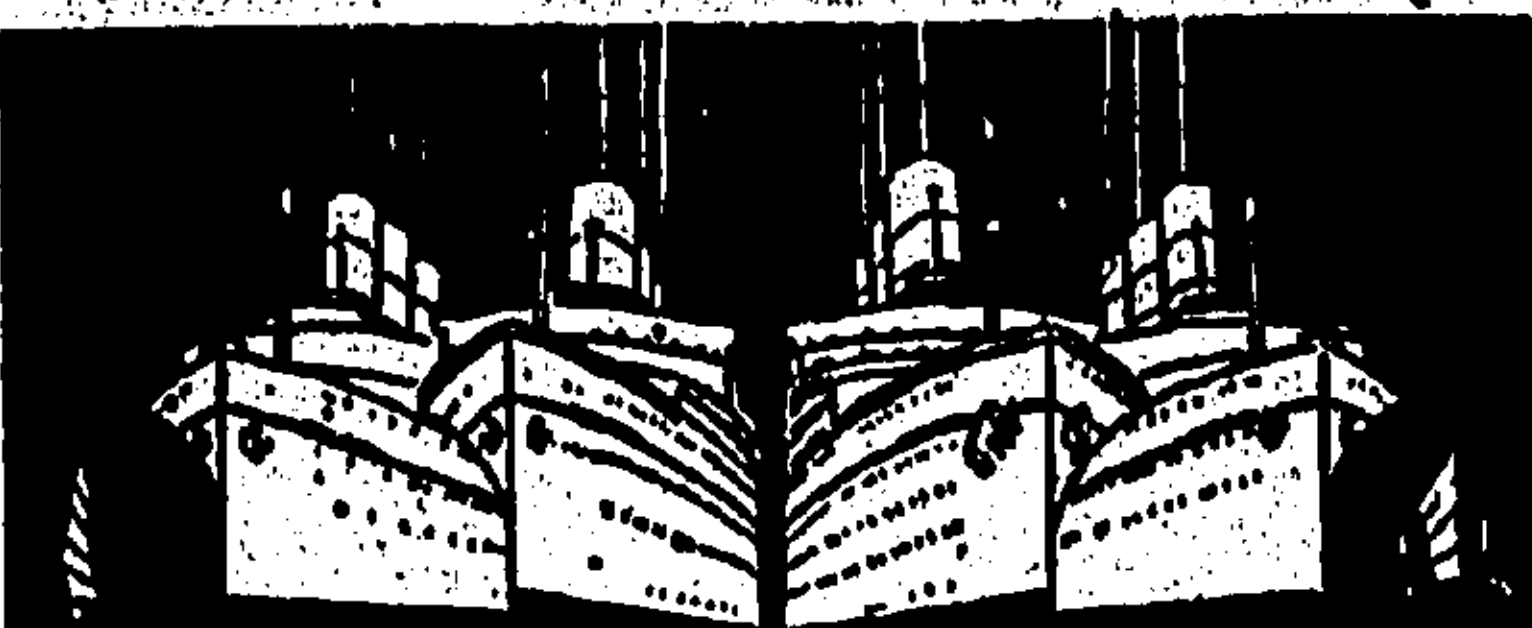

"The attitude of the Ministry is shown by the fact that I was able to interest an authority at headquarters in the possibilities of this form of work, and that, through his interest, some form of test is to be carried out at St. Mary's Hospital, Paddington."

Page 9).

After a spell of shouting English slowly to make himself understood by the saddle-coloured natives of San Xavier, Mr. Bentwell found it satisfactory to be intelligible in half a whisper.

"How'd you come here?" he asked.

"Me, sir? Oh, I did a pierhead jump from a ship, and a hardcase packet she was, believe you me. The mate had it in for me—what he didn't do to me wasn't worth talking about. Mister, could you spare a man just the price of a drink, say? I'm telling you honest God's truth when I say I've not so much as sniffed liquor for a week. And watching these Spiggotties sitting down everywhere with their peecow and their aguardiente and their cervaja—that bloke Dives in the Bible didn't know the beginnings of agony, take it from me."

He was intelligently a cut above his breed. Probably he was a good bit of a sea-lawyer, and that would account for his having to run from his last ship.

"You're talking mostly Greek to me," said Mr. Bentwell. "Aren't there other ships which'll enlist you, or whatever they call it?" A sudden puff of warm wind, almost a squall, ruffled the pages of La Prensa de San Xavier, and persisted until that filmy periodical fluttered off the round-topped table. The beachcomber neatly retrieved it, and, as if it were an anchor to hold him within the shelter of Mr. Bentwell's promise, kept it in his unspeakable hands.

"Catch any ship sign'n'-on a cove that's jumped his last ship!" scoffed the down-and-outer. "Not that any white man's ships come here, not to speak of. You wouldn't believe what it's like here, a gentleman like you. Them—vigilantes calabozos you 'as soon as look at you—they make you sweep the streets and yorac." He had, he explained, slept out in the sand-dunes beyond the town ever since making a bolt for it. Occasionally a shopkeeper would throw him an over-ripe banana, sometimes the dock-workers down at the Boca would leave him a trifle of stewed meat and manioc in their eatings. In that kindly climate a man needed mighty little in the way of food or clothing.

Mr. Bentwell encouraged him to talk on, warming to the familiar accents. He generously felt disposed to do something to help a fellow-countryman. Really shaved, trimmed, furbished, this man might become presentable—there was something fearless in the steady gaze of his sea-blue eyes. Why not a personal valet?

"Do you speak Spanish?" he asked.

"Why, sure, sir, sure. In a way, yes, I've got the bat. You pick it up ferretin' around the way I do."

"Well, if you feel like a drink," Mr. Bentwell said benignly, "there's no reason why you need go thirsty, since there's plenty here for the asking." He slapped his hands, as he had seen the regular clients do, and the obsequious waiter came forward.

"Give it a name—ask for what you want," the financier invited. The beachcomber, did, as ordered. In fluent, clumsy Castilian, he told the waiter to bring him a tumbler of aguardiente, and he licked cracked lips in anticipation.

"HERESY" AT AN OYSTER FEAST

"I Have Eaten None
Of The 10,000"

BISHOP'S CONFESSION

Colchester.

We had just reached that stage of philosophic calm which was ultimately attained by the Walrus and the Carpenter; a calm tinged with a not unpleasant melancholy at the sight of 11,000 empty shells being carried away, writes a Daily Telegraph Correspondent.

We had, in fact, partaken of the Colchester Oyster Feast, and we sat back contentedly attentive as the Bishop of Chelmsford, Dr. H. A. Wilson, rose to speak. Then came the shock.

"I have to announce that I have eaten no oysters." The Bishop's voice rang out in clear tones. "Heresy," gasped my neighbour. The man opposite turned pale, and recalling "the waiter," ordered another dozen.

The Bishop proceeded. "I understand that rather more than 10,000 oysters have been eaten to-day. I can say with a clear conscience that I have had nothing to do with the slaughter of the innocents."

"This confession will, I am aware, make me popular with none but the oysters themselves. I think I can hear the soft applause of 10,000 empty shells, thinking me for my kindness to their species."

"Now I have confessed, and you have the unpleasant truth."

And with a true appreciation of a brave man, the hundreds of oyster enthusiasts gave Dr. Wilson round after round of applause.

MILLION WORDS CASE

Judgment After 36
Days' Hearing

In a judgment lasting an hour, Mr. Justice Crossman, in the Chancery Division last month disposed of a case which began before him in May, and took 36 days to hear.

The action was by two financiers, Mr. John Goodenay and Mr. David Kerman, against the New Zealand Sulphur Company Limited, claiming rescission of agreement to take up shares in the company, and repayment of the amount of their subscription.

The company was formed to exploit the sulphur on White Island, Bay of Plenty. The plaintiffs said it was on the faith of representation as to the quantity and purity of the sulphur on the island that they took up the shares.

White Island is volcanic and was once the scene of eruptions causing loss of life. Coloured models of the island before and after the eruptions were produced. In court, the correspondence totalled nearly 6,000 pages, and the daily transcripts of the short-hand notes ran into 1,000,000 words.

By his judgment, Mr. Justice Crossman gave Messrs. Goodenay and Kerman the relief they asked for. The company was to be dissolved, and the plaintiffs were to be repaid their subscription money. With better hotels, with up-to-date accommodation, our

NAVAL TALKS DEADLOCK

ANGLO-AMERICAN MEETING

London, To-day.—The Prime Minister, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, and the Foreign Secretary, Sir John Simon, two of the British delegates in the Naval conversations now proceeding in London, met the American delegates, Mr. Norman Davis and Mr. Ray Atherton, yesterday morning when the Americans were informed of what had passed in the recent talks with the Japanese delegates. This was followed by a general review of the position up to date, and, after a discussion, both delegations decided it was worth while continuing the conversations.

It will be recalled that at an early stage in the conversations the Japanese Naval proposals were presented, and, in sum, they proved totally unacceptable to both the British and the Americans. As no indication of a modification of these proposals was forthcoming from the Japanese side, certain suggestions were put forward by the British during the serial examination of the proposals. The Japanese delegates, after consultation with Tokyo, reflected over these suggestions, but showed a desire to continue the talks, which, however, have no far resulted in no advance. Matters were at this stage when yesterday's Anglo-American meeting took place.

No formal meetings will be held during the week-end, but social engagements will bring some of the delegates, including Sir John Simon and Mr. Davis, into contact. Farther Anglo-Japanese conversations will take place next week, probably on Wednesday.—British Wireless Service.

INDIAN SAFEGUARDS

Major Walter Elliott Speaks On Report

London, To-day.

Major Walter Elliott, Minister of Agriculture in a speech at Glasgow yesterday, referring to the Indian report, emphasised that its whole scheme of the all India Federation, comprising autonomous provinces and Indian States, was based on the principle of responsibility with safeguards.

That did not mean safeguards were to be normally and continuously in operation, he said. They were there for use in emergency, and he believed that they would be fully effective in case of need, but he did not believe that the existence of proper safeguards should, or would, prevent the steady development of self-government by responsibly-minded Indians.—British Wireless Service.

TREASURY BILLS ISSUE

London, To-day.—The total amount applied for in tenders for the £40,000,000 Treasury bills was £48,555,000. The maximum amount was allotted in bills at three months. The average rate per cent. was 6/8.9d., as compared with 4/9.4d a week ago.—British Wireless Service.

New York, To-day.—Members of the Administration are discussing the possibility of Federal tax reductions, with the object of seeking to induce industry to increase construction expenditures.—United Press, per S. E. Levy and Company.

SPEAKS ON INDIAN PROBLEM

Everyone was agreed there must be an advance towards self-government in India, but not such a complete system of self-government as to deprive her of the guidance and direction from this country, which had brought her out of chaos to her present condition of peace and security.

The differences, which appeared in the Conservative party on the subject, were narrowed down to two things—how far they should go, and how fast they should go. He thought, after consideration, that the great majority of the Conservative party would be of one mind.—British Wireless Service.

On the evening of that day Their Majesties the King and Queen are giving a state banquet at Buckingham Palace in honour of the King and Queen of Denmark, who are also to be their guests for the wedding.—British Wireless Service.
